English unites the important skills of reading, writing, speaking and listening.

Literacy skills are taught in class during English lessons but are also encouraged and applied in other lessons and important areas of school life such as class assemblies, drama productions, humanities lessons and SMSC / RE discussions. At St Stephen's, we continually look for opportunities to promote literacy skills through all areas of the curriculum.

Approaches to Teaching and Learning

- Objectives taught through daily English lessons with clear Lesson Objectives and Success Criteria.
- The study of English is split into 3 areas: Reading (word reading and comprehension), Writing (transcription, composition and vocabulary, grammar and punctuation) and Spoken Language.
- A variety of genres and media types are explored over the course of study to provide depth and breadth of learning including fiction, non-fiction and poetry.
- Each English unit is assessed at the end with an 'end task' which is assessed against key success criteria. This assessment, plus formative assessment from the class teacher, is used to inform further planning.
- Each unit lasts between 2 and 4 weeks.
- There is a strong emphasis on pupil editing and self-assessment
- ICT is an integral part of Literacy for pupils to edit redraft and present work in a variety of media.

In the foundation stage, emphasis is upon phonics (Read, Write Inc) and teaching the pupils to read. The discrete teaching of phonics continues in Years 1 and 2. In the summer term, Year 1 completes a national phonics assessment.

A wide range of teaching strategies will be employed to deliver the objectives:

- Collaborative work
- Demonstration
- Modelling of reading and writing
- Range of questioning
- Self-assessment and review
- Peer support and assessment
- Listening and presentation of ideas
- Independent/ group research

Planning

Clear and careful planning is important to the success of the teaching and learning of English. Lessons are planned in phases with reference to the NC English objectives. Assessment is carefully planned into each phase. It is vital that effective use of assessment material is used to inform planning and monitor progression.

Lessons follow a clear teaching sequence and teachers will plan differentiated activities to meet the individual needs within their class.

Teacher's focused teaching or additional support will also be incorporated in the planning.

Assessment

A range of assessment opportunities will be planned for the end of each unit. These take the form of an end piece of writing that encapsulates the child's learning as well as self-assessment, observations, discussions and shared work.

The end piece of writing for each unit is assessed against key criteria and targets are given to help the child progress.

In addition there are:

- Formal writing, reading and GPS assessments completed from years 1-6 at the end of half each term.
- Informal reading and comprehension assessments completed every half term.
- Spelling tests weekly
- Regular informal grammar and punctuation assessments
- Regular informal phonics assessments in Reception and Year 1
